Adding clarity to medical reports

Reports provided by medical experts to legal or insurance firms are not always clear. When interpretation or supplementary information is needed, Spineworks can help.

Most medical reports provided to legal and insurance firms during the litigation process are perfectly acceptable. But sometimes they require further clarification, and sometimes they need to be contested.

At Spineworks we can undertake a professional and objective evaluation of medical reports in your possession, and provide back expert comment and suggestions. We can give written, email or telephone advice to aid understanding as well as guidance regarding relevant supplementary questions.

Our aim is to help facilitate settlement on the best possible terms.

HOW SPINEWORKS IS DIFFERENT

Spineworks is not just another 'medical reporting organisation'. We provide the best medical advice based upon written reports.

We can help legal or insurance firms with direct and face-to-face assistance. Or we can train claims handling staff or legal teams, so that they can better interpret reports and be more aware of the requirements of medical experts.

What's more, we can help cut costs, and improve timescales and communications. For example, Spineworks can indicate which records should be sent to medical experts, so that expensive time is not wasted sifting through notes and records.
